DETAILED ACTION

Reasons for Allowance

- 1. Claim 1 is allowed over the prior art of record, because the prior art of record does not disclose "a first converting device configured to convert a first input voltage signal into a primary logic supply voltage signal; a second converting device configured to convert a second input voltage signal into a backup logic supply voltage signal; wherein the first and second converting devices are configured so that the voltage level of the primary logic supply voltage signal is higher than the backup logic supply voltage signal". Along with the rest of the claim.
- 2. Claim 9 is allowed over the prior art of record, because the prior art of record does not disclose "a fault-tolerance module operably connected to the first and second input nodes, the fault- tolerance device being configured to allocate one of the first and second voltage signals as a logic supply voltage of the circuit card, while the other of the first and second voltage signals remains idle, wherein the fault tolerance module is configured to allocate the one of the first and second voltage signals as the logic supply voltage based on a difference in voltage levels between the first and second voltage signals". Along with the rest of the claim
- 3. Claim 20 is allowed over the prior art of record, because the prior art of record does not disclose "redundant power distribution buses operably connected to the power supply device to distribute the redundant DC supply voltages; and one or more circuit cards, each including, a digital logic device; and an interface operably connected to the redundant power distribution buses to receive the redundant DC supply voltages, wherein the interface is configured to allocate one of the redundant DC supply voltages as a logic supply voltage for the digital logic device based on a difference in voltage levels between the redundant DC supply voltages".
